SHOT DEAD BY NEGRO AS PARADE PASSED

Lynching Narrowly Averted During Fourth of July Celebration at Harrisonburg, Va.

HARRISONBURG, Va., July 6.—The celebration of the Fourth of July brought to Harrisonburg the largest number of visitors ever in the town on a single day, the crowd being estimated at 30,000 persons. Immediately after the monster parade, which was over two miles long and filled with floats of the more prominent business firms, and while eleven bands were playing a tragedy was enacted in earshot of the multitude, when Frank Barbour, colored, of Augusta county, shot and instantly killed James Lee, a well known Newryman.

At the scene of the tragedy there was no policeman, and the negro was caught by bystanders and turned over to the authorities. Before the negro was landed in jail a mob of 5,000 bent on lynching collected. Circuit Judge T. N. Haas and Mayor O. B. Roller made addresses to the crowd, promising a speedy trial and imploring that the law be allowed to take its course. These, aided by the sheriff and his deputies with drawn guns, held the crowd at bay.

Lee was sixty years old and leaves a wife, two daughters and a son. Lee caught the negro in the act of stealing whisky and ordered him out of the stable. The negro walked out, then turned and shot Lee down.

SHIRTSWAISTS TO Women Leaders

FOR AN INVALID.

A dainty suggestion is offered here for a house gown or a gown for a semi-invalid. It is simply, but prettily, made of gray cashmere, with pleatings of white net at the throat and falling from beneath the sleeves. The frock has a simple full bodice and trailing skirt gathered into a girle of gray liberty, which passes front and back through a stolid tunic of the material. The edges of this overdress are caught loosely together over the hips by buttons of silk and silk cord. The sleeve is short and slashed open, showing the net sleeves beneath, and is untrimmed.

HOW TO PROTECT THE HAIR WHILE SALT-WATER BATHING

Wrap Heavy Towel Tightly Around Head to Absorb Water That Leaks in Under Rubber Cap.

It is useless for a girl to try to appear beautiful when in bathing, if she wishes to keep her hair dry, and in my opinion good looks should be sacrificed, because nothing will more quickly destroy color and texture of the tresses than salt water.

To keep salt water from the hair, oil-skin scalp is excellent, but not sufficient protection, for when the waves dash up from below, as in swimming, water gets in between the cap edge and hair, and then is held in. Unless extra protection is combined with the cap, I consider it, because it can hold water, worse than nothing.

It isn't pretty, but a cloth bandage beneath the edge keeps out water. For this a rather small towel should be folded to a width of five inches. The hair should be twisted like a rope on the back of the head, but not brought up to the forehead, for there is danger of wetting, when it is too far forward. The bandage should be held above the left ear, at the edge of the hair, and brought around tight behind the head, and down below the hair.

The bandage should be pinned firmly wherever it stops. I know one girl who passes over this a strip of oil skin, five inches wide, but this precaution is hardly necessary.

The cap, when pulled over the bandage, should cover it. If it does not, only about one-half the width will be exposed. The object of the bandage is to absorb the water that otherwise would make its way to the hair. A girl who swims will require a thicker towel, for once the absorbent qualities are used, water will surely reach the hair, but an ordinary towel will hold a large quantity.

A big silk handkerchief over such a bandage makes it less homespun, and a wide shade hat covers unbecomingly, but the latter is apt to be in the way. When salt water has soaked into the hair it must be washed out at once. It causes both stickiness of the locks and dryness of the scalp, a combination injurious as well as unpleasant. To release salt water from the hair soap should not be used, unless of a kind made especially for salt water, for the former increases stickiness.

Plenty of clear water will remove the salt. Dry the hair rapidly in the sun. MARGARET MIXTER.

CLOVER LUNCHEON DAINY FORM OF ENTERTAINMENT

One of the prettiest of luncheons for afternoon or evening can be worked out with clover as a motif. All the decorations can be of clover, red and white. Bowls of the fragrant blossoms should stand on mantel and tables, while in the center of the lunch table spread with dollies and napkins repeating the motif design may be a block of green turf from which springs a bunch of fresh and growing pink white clover. Let the large red clover leaves radiate from this to each corner, where there should be little bouquets of leaves and blossoms.

The refreshments can be Arcadian in their simplicity. If you wish to serve a course luncheon have berries as nature for the first course, then sorrel soup with croutons and sorrel leaves or cream. Follow with clover fritters, which are made from the white clover blossoms dipped in regular fritter batter and browned quickly in olive oil, and clover sandwiches, which are delicate slices of homemade bread spread with sweet butter that has been packed in a basket of fresh clover blossoms long enough to become impregnated with the odor.

Hot lettuce and honey make a delightful course and honey cakes with strawberry sauce. For the fourth course, clover sandwiches with honey cakes and ice cream, supplemented by a fruit punch and homemade mint, pink and white, will be sufficient.

Any of the flower or butterfly games will be appropriate. Here, for example, is a flower contest. Provide each girl with a typewritten copy of the question and answer. The first to answer such a list accurately receives the prize.

1. The flower of June. Rose.
2. The flower that calls to church. Bell.
3. The flower that describes a large and vigorous girl. Bouncing Baby.
4. The flower with dark eyes that blooms in July fields. Black-eyed Susan.
5. "Wee Crimmon Tipped Flower." Daisy.
6. The precise flower. Primrose.
7. The flower that is the color of her hair. Marigold.
8. The flower that stands for thought. pansy.
9. The flower associated with Faust. Marjoram.
10. The flower that poets love. Violet.
11. The flower that describes a number of friends. Quaker Ladies.
12. This list can be extended to include as many more names as desired.

For prizes that can be made at home nothing is prettier than hand-embroidered belts or opera glass bags, using the clover blossom design. Instead of having a crab bag I would bestow the gifts by the unraveling of a cobweb. Before the arrival of the company winter rings and different colors all over the house, passing them through keyholes, outdoors, in the windows upstairs and down.

When the time for unraveling the web arrives give each person the end of a string which she must follow until she reaches the dainty little souvenir concealed at the end.

Dress Hints.

Outing hats for young women are particularly charming this summer. There is a mushroom shape of Java straw that is pretty and quite in style. The crown is round with a rosette bow on the right side, while the left, at a point directly opposite the rosette is decorated with loose bunches of polyanthus.

This is a sailor shape, covered smoothly with white linen, the trimming, a scarf of white net caught in the front with a huge spray of wild roses.

It is remarkable what nice serviceable dresses and suits in white duck can be bought for $5. It seems worth while to buy the material and take the trouble of making when they can be bought so reasonably. Imagine a semiprincess gown of soft white duck with panel front and back, the former handsomely embroidered and the latter pleated, the lower half of the skirt a deep round effect filled in with chemise of net sold for this sum.

The sleeves are long and trimmed at the wrists with embroidery. One may choose from white, blue, lavender, tan and rose.

A Curious Nest.

From St. Nicholas.

Last year, early in June, a beautiful pair of wood thrushes, or wood robins as we often call them, began to build their nest in a pear tree within a few feet of the house and twelve feet from the ground. It was one of the most public places they could have selected—close to the door which people were constantly using and within ten feet of the street with its bustle and noise.

The nest progressed rapidly to completion through rain and shine. The bulk of it was made of coarse leaf stems, grass and strips of bark. All were solidly fastened together with mud gathered from the street. But they departed from their usual method of nest building by weaving in a large number of strips of white cloth as the inner lining of roots was finished, and the eggs, three in number, of a greenish-blue color, were laid. Two of them were hatched and the young birds safely raised.

Five days later another nest similar in every way was begun nearby and decorated with its ornament of strips, but the birds abandoned it before completion for unknown reasons.

POSTAL SAVINGS BANKS TO BRING OUT HOARDS

U. S. Treasury, Circular Says, Will Be Benefited—Bonds May Be Refunded.

NEW YORK, July 6.—The July circular of the National City Bank, in discussing the possible benefits to the federal Treasury of the operation of the new postal savings banks law, says:

"In its bearings upon Treasury affairs the new postal savings bank law is practically a government finance bill. The law is one which will operate in various directions if its workings prove measurably justifiable of the theory on which it was constructed and on which it was adopted by the President and members of the administration.

"It is expected that its first effect will be to call from its hiding places considerable money that is now hoarded by persons who have not yet learned to have confidence in the established banking institutions of the country.

"There is every reason to believe that the aggregate of such sums reaches well into the millions. Whatever the sum, nearly all this money will be put promptly at work under the new law. It will constitute a new source of banking deposits. The law requires that 5 per cent of the postal savings funds shall be held in the United States Treasury as a reserve, permits the investment of 30 per cent in government bonds or other securities and specifically declares its intent to keep the remaining 65 per cent on deposit in the national and state banks of the communities of origin, although there is no provision which even this may be invested in government securities upon the decision by the President that the general welfare or the interests of the government demand it.

How It Will Benefit.
"But there are several distinct ways in which the accumulation of postal savings may serve the United States Treasury at times when financing operations are necessary. For some months the Treasury has been selling very close to the wind, with the prospect of having to face the issue of bonds or other securities at almost any time. By careful work and with the assistance of the corporation tax, which is now coming in, it is expected that the Treasury will be able to postpone at least until fall, after the general elections.

"With an issue of canal bonds proper out of the Treasury, the postal savings bank law affords a source of relief which in no seems probable will even this may provide the needed funds. The new law authorizes a special issue of 25 per cent bonds, which by specific provision do not carry the circulation privilege. This rate of interest would hardly give them an investment basis, but it is provided that the postal savings funds may be invested in them. Under this provision the way lies open for the reimbursement of the Treasury for these heavy canal expenditures as soon as the postal banks have attracted sufficient deposits. This is the most material and practical means of relieving the Treasury which the new law affords.

Effect on National Banks.
"Another possibility is that the $64,000,000 of 3 per cent 1906-16 bonds now outstanding might be refunded by the new 2½ per cent issue. The 3s are payable, and the new law specifically provides that whenever any outstanding bonds are subject to

Wonderful Discovery By Dr. Wyeth

Washington's Foremost Dentist Has Relief For Thousands.

call they may be replaced by the new authorized 2½ per cent issue.

"A third possibility is one which may yet have a profound effect on the national banks of the country. In attempting to establish a central bank one of the first and most difficult problems to be solved would be that of providing for the national bank notes now outstanding. In order to make satisfactory provision for them some means must be found for taking care of the $685,000,000 of 2 per cent bonds now pledged by the national banks as security for circulation and public deposits. The new law authorizes the investment of postal savings funds in the 2 per cent bonds. By purchasing these bonds from national banks for account of the postal savings system corresponding national bank circulation would be retired and the way would be paved for the issue of that amount of notes by the new central bank."

JEALOUS OF WIFE'S DOG.
One Ground for Complaint on Which Mrs. Patterson Gains Divorce.
ATLANTA, July 6.—Mrs. Marjorie Patterson, the beautiful young wife of Fred W. Patterson, a leader in Atlanta business and social circles, was yesterday granted a divorce on the ground of cruelty. Mrs. Patterson alleges her husband was unreasonably jealous of her and cruelly abused her because she did not make all his shirts. "Mr. Patterson was always jealous of me," her deposition read. "He was even jealous of my little dog and made me give him up."
